Keeping Reptiles Out

Snakes are an integral part of the environment and play an important role in wildlife ecosystems. However, you can discourage snakes and other reptiles from using your property by making your house and garden less attractive to them.

The following measures may help to keep reptiles out of your house and garden:

- Keep the garden and sheds tidy and well-maintained, and prune lower branches off of shrubs to remove places for reptiles to shelter.
- Keep food scraps/compost in properly covered bins.
- Block off possible entrances to and access underneath sheds.
- Block off potential entry points to houses by installing screens on doors and windows and blocking small holes, including those between the roof and ceiling. Fit rubber weather seals under doors to deny access to adult snakes. Remember that snakes can squeeze through surprisingly small gaps.
- Control rat and mice numbers in and around houses and sheds.
- Reinforce chicken coops and aviaries to exclude both rodents and large reptiles by covering them completely with mesh that is small enough (<10mm) to stop them from entering - if mice can get in, so could a snake.
- Keep chicken coops and aviaries clean and hygienic.

For further information please read the Fauna Notes pamphlet.

Anyone who comes across a snake needs to have eyes on it at all times until the arrival of a reptile handler. Also- Wildlife Services and the Shire Ranger can handle any reptile issue that may arise.

Meeting date: Friday 7 December

Time: 2:00pm - 4:00pm Talking about: Benang

Oceanic in its rhythms and understanding, brilliant in its use of language and image, moving in its largeness of spirit, compelling in its narrative scope and style, Benang is a novel of celebration and lament, of beginning and return, of obliteration and recovery, of silencing and of powerful utterance. Both tentative and daring, it speaks to the present and a possible future through stories, dreams, rhythms, songs, images and documents mobilised from the incompletely acknowledged and still dynamic past.
